Aberdeen May 6th 1854

My Dear Aunt-

After waiting in vain for a answer to my last letter, I take my seat for the purpose of troubling you with a few lines, as I have nothing of great importance to attend this hour. No one could have made me believe it would have been this long before I received a letter from you, in answer to my last. I don't think you write to me more than once a year, if that often.

I know my letters are dull and uninteresting to you, but nevertheless I think you might afford to write some times if you write only one line, and if you do not write yourself. George says I will forgive you once more, but I do not know that I can practice the same lesson over again.

Aberdeen is very dull now, at least it seems so to me, as I never go any where or see any person, I am not even acquainted with the news of the day.

Our school is progressing finely. I will not attempt to enumerate my various studies, and how I like them &c, suffice it to say I am trying to do my best, Aunt Mary Gordon, brought me a beautiful bonnet from
